Queens Cloth Cutter Proves He's a Baronet

By NAN ROBERTSON

Queens Cloth Cutter Proves He's a Baronet

By NAN ROBERTSON

Jean Leet DuBar — of the Long Island Town of East Hampton — was just a newspaper and clothing center.

Jean was the son of James and Mary DuBar, and carried the family of Sewing, in which he specialized. DuBar's name and reputation are equally well known.

The 16-year-old Jean, now the official tailor of Long Island City, is so eminent in the field of tailoring.

He has lived in the city for some years, and was for many years a member of the Sewing and Clothing

She left him with Young John, son of Sir Peter

due to his dangerous

As a child, DuBar worked in a stock room in a干 goods store on Queens. He worked as a skeleton stockman in several stores, and bought a style of his own.

DuBar's style is noted for its beauty, simplicity, and beauty, which has led to him being a well-known tailor in the city.

He married Marie DuBar, of Queens, in 1790. They had three children, and their home was a model of beauty and comfort.

The DuBars lived in the city,
where they had a large
establishment. Jean DuBar, who was his brother, was also a well-known tailor.

A letter was written by Jean DuBar, who had been a tailor
for many years in the city, to the editor of the New York Times.

"I was a tailor for many years in the city," he wrote. "I have been active in the trade,
and have been known to many people."

Jean DuBar, who was a
tailor for many years,
was active in the trade
and well-known.

He married Marie DuBar, of
Queens, in 1790. They had
three children and their
home was a model of
beauty and comfort.

The DuBars lived in the city,
where they had a large
establishment. Jean DuBar,
who was his brother, was also
a well-known tailor.

A letter was written by Jean
DuBar, who had been a tailor
for many years in the city, to the editor of the New York Times.

"I was a tailor for many
years in the city," he
wrote. "I have been
active in the trade,
and have been known to many
people."

Jean DuBar, who was a
tailor for many years,
was active in the trade
and well-known.

He married Marie DuBar, of
Queens, in 1790. They had
three children and their
home was a model of
beauty and comfort.

The DuBars lived in the city,
where they had a large
establishment. Jean DuBar,
who was his brother, was also
a well-known tailor.

A letter was written by Jean
DuBar, who had been a tailor
for many years in the city, to the editor of the New York Times.

"I was a tailor for many
years in the city," he
wrote. "I have been
active in the trade,
and have been known to many
people."

Jean DuBar, who was a
tailor for many years,
was active in the trade
and well-known.

He married Marie DuBar, of
Queens, in 1790. They had
three children and their
home was a model of
beauty and comfort.

The DuBars lived in the city,
where they had a large
establishment. Jean DuBar,
who was his brother, was also
a well-known tailor.

A letter was written by Jean
DuBar, who had been a tailor
for many years in the city, to the editor of the New York Times.

"I was a tailor for many
years in the city," he
wrote. "I have been
active in the trade,
and have been known to many
people."

Jean DuBar, who was a
tailor for many years,
was active in the trade
and well-known.

He married Marie DuBar, of
Queens, in 1790. They had
three children and their
home was a model of
beauty and comfort.

The DuBars lived in the city,
where they had a large
establishment. Jean DuBar,
who was his brother, was also
a well-known tailor.

A letter was written by Jean
DuBar, who had been a tailor
for many years in the city, to the editor of the New York Times.

"I was a tailor for many
years in the city," he
wrote. "I have been
active in the trade,
and have been known to many
people."

Jean DuBar, who was a
tailor for many years,
was active in the trade
and well-known.

He married Marie DuBar, of
Queens, in 1790. They had
three children and their
home was a model of
beauty and comfort.

The DuBars lived in the city,
where they had a large
establishment. Jean DuBar,
who was his brother, was also
a well-known tailor.

A letter was written by Jean
DuBar, who had been a tailor
for many years in the city, to the editor of the New York Times.

"I was a tailor for many
years in the city," he
wrote. "I have been
active in the trade,
and have been known to many
people."

Jean DuBar, who was a
tailor for many years,